UNIQUE PUZZLE GAME DEVISED TO ADVERTISE WORLD'S FAIR

WORLD'S FAIR PUZZLE DESIGNED BY T. S. BALLEW TO A DVERTISE THE EXPOSITION.

T S Ballew of Kirkwood, the inventor of everal puzzle games which have brought him money and a reputation in certain circles, has designed a novel and entertaining game which will shortly be put upon the market. He calls it the "Trip to Chinatown Game," but it will most likely become more widely known as the "World's Fair Game," as it was designed mainly with the idea of exploiting the World's Fair. . Mr. Ballew showed a rough outline of the Cooper in the Vista bathhouse, was called in Judge Ryan's court yesterday, but, owing to some misunderstanding of course, it was laid over until to-day.

When the case was called Attorney Crittenden Clark, who defended Strother at his former trial, declared that Strother was dissatisfied with him and had employed Attorney Louis E. Jones, Clark said that therefore he wished to withdraw from the case.

Judge Ryan asked why the attorney had the case.

Mr. Ballew believes the game will make chase will be distinctly outlined. All the mountain ranges, takes and principal rivers are shown in profile and the leading cities by cup-shape depressions. The routes of four of the principal raifroad lines running from Boston to San Francisco, centering in St. Louis, are also indicated by depressions. The surface of the map declines toward St. Louis, which is one-quarter of an inch lower than the cities on the coasts, the lakes and the Gulf.

The game is to roll four small balls, representing a family journeying across the continent, from New York to San Francisco, in such a manner as to make the trip without entering St. Louis. It is the purpose of the family to avoid visiting the Warld's Fair. The balls are to be rolled along the depressions marking the railroad and advertising ald, one St. Louis firm has ordered 19,99 of them for free distribution to its customers.

NEED MONEY FOR PLAYGROUNDS

Schools and Summer Sports for Children Begin This Month.

The ladles who are preparing to open vacation playgrounds and summer schools in St. Louis this summer are confronted with the problem of how they are to work out the problem of how they are to work out their plans with their present funds. They decided at a meeting yesterday afternoon in First Congregational Church, Definar near Grand avenue, that the schools and playgrounds should be opened on the last Monday in June, and on a much larger scale than last year.

Last year there were three schools and children were turned away for want of accommodations. Outlings were given at the various parks near and within the city. A fine new school building has been added for this year and the oil ones have been remodeled. Outlings will be held for a week at a time at points distant from the city, and an Excursion Committee, of which Mrs. Johnson is chairman, has been working to this end. Eight directors and as many assistants will be paid salaries, as well as janitors for the buildings, Hamboldt. Shields and Dumas schools, and one at Third and Victor streets.

Mrs. Price Lane, treasurer of the society, reported that there was only $1,443.57 in the treasury. It will require almost this amount to pay salaries and incidental expenses. The ladder look to friends of the movement to contribute the money to defray the excursion and outling expenses that have to contribute the money to defray the excursion and outing expenses that have
